MANY FACULTY CHANGES COMING AT MID-PACIFIC

Important Additions to Corps Will Strengthen Staff of Schools

Fifteen new teachers, nine of whom have already been secured, will come from the mainland to Mid-Pacific Institute this fall as instructors for Mills school and Kawaiahao seminary. While some of these will come to fill positions to be vacated by present teachers, others will take up new work just beginning in the two schools.

Five of the 15 teachers will have work in Kawaiahao, and one of these, Miss Katherine N. Adams, will take the position of principal at that school. Miss Mary Kinney, who has served as acting principal since Miss Mabel Boshier, the former principal, left last winter to become Mrs. Doremus Scudder, will take the position of vice-principal for the coming year.

At Mills school, John F. Nelson takes up the work of principal, which has been left by Dr. Robert Day Williams, newly elected president of Mid-Pacific Institute. M. L. Copeland, who has had charge of the commercial classes at Mills for three years just past, resigns this work to become bookkeeper for both schools, and manager of buying, building and repairs.

Among the teachers who are leaving this year are Miss Harriet Congdon, Miss Julia Peabody, George Merritt, Carl Cassingham, Howard Botts and William E. Berner, from Mills; Miss Ethel Mills, Mrs. Hinkley, Miss Esther Kallio, Miss Gossett and Miss Hedger, from Kawaiahao.

Following is the list of new teachers as already arranged:

Miss Katherine N. Adams, principal of Kawaiahao seminary, from two years as dean of women at Drury College, Springfield, Missouri; four years as dean at Beloit, five years as dean at Huron College, South Dakota. Studied in Columbia and Oxford, England. Miss Georgia Hays, from Columbia, Missouri, to take playground work and physical training classes at Kawaiahao.

Miss Ruth S. Tubbs, as instructor of music at Kawaiahao in place of Miss Edith Mills, is from Monmouth, Illinois, and a teacher of experience in school music.

Miss Anna M. Bille, now dean of women at Fullerton College, Southern California. Miss Bille has had much success as a teacher of boys and young men, her specialty being English.

Miss Anna McKelrick is an Oberlin graduate, and has also a diploma from the Miami Normal school, where she took practice work in teaching. Miss McKelrick will come to Mills.

Hogarth Pettijohn will come to Mills school as teacher of special English classes, having made a study of that work at Washburn College and at Yale, and had practical experience at Roberts College, Constantinople. This is one of the new branches of the Mills curriculum. Mr. Pettijohn will also have charge of the musical work at the school. He was at one time president of the glee club at Washburn College.

Willard C. Ross of the University of Colorado will have charge of athletics, the school hospital and dispensary, and will teach classes in physiology and hygiene.

Robert E. Stone of the University of California will have classes in religious education and in history.

Lindon L. Lynch, University of Nebraska, will teach high school science at Mills.

There are four positions yet to fill at Mills school: one of mathematics instructor, two in the grades and one in the commercial department.

Two positions are yet to be filled in the grade rooms at Kawaiahao seminary, besides the position of hospital superintendent.

With the graduation of the senior class of Mills School and the eighth grade of Mills school and Kawaiahao Seminary, closing exercises of the year were held yesterday for Mid-Pacific Institute, taking place in Wilcox hall of Mills.

Thirty-nine young people—nine boys from Mills high school, 13 from the eighth grade at the same institution and 17 girls from Kawaiahao, made up the graduating classes.

Trustees and graduates marched into the hall to the processional, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," and seated themselves on the platform in front, which was decorated simply but effectively with ferns and palms.

Invocation was delivered by Rev. O. H. Gulick, following which a special chorus from Kawaiahao Seminary sang "Spring's Invitation," by Ellen Beach Yaw.

Umematsu Watada of Lihue, Kauai, as class orator, delivered a strong call upon the youth of Hawaii to throw themselves into the life of Hawaii's plantations and lift it to a higher moral plane.

Under the direction of Arthur Hudson the Mid-Pacific chorus then sang "The Flower of Liberty," by Nordlinger.

Rev. Henry Sloan Coffin, D. D., delivered the commencement address, choosing as his subject the joys of following the Christian life. Dr. Coffin spoke briefly but masterly and held the close attention of his entire audience as he talked.

He declared that among the joys of the Christian living are the sense of safety, the sense of being guided so one cannot make a serious mistake, the feeling of strength for work, and the fact that the life makes whole men and women.

"It takes all of a man to be a Christian," he said, "and there is nothing more difficult, but the following of Christ is the happiest of all lives."

His message to the graduates was to put themselves into the life of Hawaii with the determination to create ideal homes, plantations, towns and cities through the advantages they had gained by education and Christian training.

Following another song "The Lonely Rose," by the Mills School Glee Club, the diplomas were conferred. Principal-elect John F. Nelson presented the Mills School graduates, and Miss Mary Kinney, acting-principal of Kawaiahao, the graduates of that institution. Dr. Robert Day Williams as president of the Mid-Pacific institute conferred the diplomas.

Dr. Williams also gave the announcements of the year, which included mention of present teachers leaving and new ones to come. He stated that several of the new teachers will come to take new positions that have been developed with the growth of the school.

In his closing message Dr. Williams also outlined a few of the needs of the two schools, declaring that needs are a sure sign of an institution's life. He spoke of the need of a domestic science building for the girls of Kawaiahao, of a manual training building for the boys of Mills, a Gulick preparatory school for the small children, and a rest cottage for the teachers of both schools.

Rev. Doremus Scudder pronounced the benediction.

One of the interesting features of the presentation of diplomas was the giving of a paper lei in the school colors to each graduate, who, with the many leis from friends and relatives, were covered from head to foot.

Exhibits from the manual training rooms, the dairy and the Commercial department of Mills School, together with sketches and drawings by the boys of the lower grades, formed an interesting display in the class rooms of the institution.

Those who were graduated yesterday are as follows:

Mills high school—Raphael Wan Chiu Ai and Kyozo Yanagi from the college preparatory course; Joseph Halulu Amos, Lum Kam Moon, Shuichi Hayashi and Umematsu Watada from the general course; James Sadami Kono, Tetsuichi Kurasbige and George Matsui Sueoka, from the commercial course.
